What are cookies?

A 'cookie' is a small text file, which the website is placing on your computer or mobile device as soon as you visit the website. It enables the website to remember your activities (such as login, language, display settings etc.) for a predefined period of time. This procedure can thus make your repeated browsing of the website easier, as you, for example, do not have to enter your login data again or set language preferences, Now as through cookies website owners acquire information on your preferences upon browsing the websites you visit, they may also, for example, present relevant advertising, which complies with your needs. You can control cookies yourself, i.e. for example by setting up your use of cookies through your web browser, or you can delete the cookies.
